

MARITIMES REGION OPERATIONS DURING COVID-19 SITUATION

Fisheries and Oceans Canada remains open for business during the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic.

Our Maritimes Region staff across the Region, including Licensing, Conservation & Protection, Area Offices, Small Craft Harbours, Science and Resource & Aboriginal Fisheries Management are on the job.

Right now, most of our staff are working from their homes. They're working to keep our operations as normal as possible.

We know that you need information, that you have questions and concerns about your fisheries. We are bringing harvesters, members of industry and Indigenous representatives together through virtual advisory committee meetings, and in other ways, to gather information, and ensure we can help in answering your questions.

We are working on a document to help answer the most frequent questions that we have received, and hope to have that completed and made available soon. We will be working with your associations, representatives and the advisory committees to distribute general information updates as frequently as possible. We are also creating a page on our website where you'll be able to go to find the latest information.

Thank you for your patience in these trying circumstances.
